UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
NORTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA

TERRENCE DAVIS,

No. C-06-6108 EMC

Plaintiff,

RELATED TO

v.

No. C-09-0980 EMC

MICHAEL J. ASTRUE, Commissioner of the Social Security Administration,

ORDER DENYING DEFENDANT’S MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT

Defendant.

(Docket No. 195 in C-06-6108; Docket No. 109 in C-09-0980)

JOHN DOE,

Plaintiff,

v.

MICHAEL J. ASTRUE, Commissioner of the Social Security Administration,

Defendant.

Plaintiffs have sued the Commissioner of the Social Security Administration (“SSA”), asserting claims for violation of the Rehabilitation Act. According to Plaintiffs, SSA has violated the Rehabilitation Act by failing to make the work reviews under Title II and Title XVI accessible to individuals with mental or developmental disabilities. See Docket No. 162 (Pls.’ Mot. for Summ. Judg. (“MSJ”) at 2)<sup>1</sup>. Currently pending before the Court is the SSA’s motion for summary

1 judgment. In the motion, SSA argues that Plaintiffs lack standing to assert their claims. SSA further 2 argues that, based on the deposition testimony of Plaintiffs, the Court lacks jurisdiction over their 3 cases. Having considered the parties' briefs and accompanying submissions, as well as the oral 4 argument of counsel, the Court hereby DENIES SSA's motion.

5 I. FACTUAL & PROCEDURAL BACKGROUND

6 This case has a complicated procedural background. Mr. Davis's case was initiated in 7 September 2006, and Mr. Doe's case in March 2009. In each case, SSA filed a Rule 12(b) motion to 8 dismiss based on, inter alia, a claimed lack of standing and subject matter jurisdiction. In each case, 9 Judge Patel rejected SSA's standing and jurisdiction arguments. Judge Patel found standing based 10 on the emotional distress suffered by Plaintiffs. See Davis Docket No. 26 (Order at 11); Doe Docket 11 No. 26 (Order at 17). With respect to jurisdiction, she determined that the Rehabilitation Act claims 12 were sufficiently distinct from the underlying benefits claims that exhaustion of the benefits claims 13 would not assist in resolution of the Rehabilitation Act claims. See Davis Docket No. 26 (Order at 14 11); Doe Docket No. 26 (Order at 11). As Judge Patel explained in the Doe case, even if SSA ruled 15 in Mr. Doe's favor on his claim for benefits, he still would have a valid cause of action under the 16 Rehabilitation Act. See Doe Docket No. 26 (Order at 11).

17 Notably, Mr. Davis's case (but not Mr. Doe's) was initially filed as a class action. Well 18 before Mr. Doe filed his suit, Mr. Davis moved for class certification. See Docket No. 55 (motion).
19 Judge Patel denied the motion but gave Mr. Davis leave to re-file it if, he could, within a certain 20 time period

21 1) set forth sufficient admissible evidence to satisfy the numerosity 22 requirement; 2) associate an experienced federal class-action attorney; 23 and 3) either bring forth representative plaintiffs from other parts of 24 the country who have suffered similar harm resulting from their respective SSA office policies or bring forth admissible evidence that the policies applied by the San Francisco office are applied by all SSA district offices nationwide.

25 Docket No. 74 (Order at 24). Mr. Davis never re-filed and instead filed an amended complaint 26 which no longer included class allegations. See Docket No. 86 (fourth amended complaint).
27 Several months after Mr. Davis filed his amended complaint, Mr. Doe initiated his lawsuit, which, 28 as noted above, also contained no class allegations.

1 In August 2010, Plaintiffs filed an early motion for summary judgment pursuant to Judge 2 Patel's directive that they do so. See Docket No. 146 (Tr. at 28); Docket No. 170 (Pyle Decl., Ex. 1) 3 (Tr. at 6). Apparently, Judge Patel wanted Plaintiffs to file a summary judgment motion so that 4 Plaintiffs would have to clearly state what relief they wanted from the Court. Judge Patel had 5 concerns that Plaintiffs would be asking for "expansive" relief that went "way beyond" Plaintiffs 6 themselves. Docket No. 170 (Pyle Decl., Ex. 1) (Tr. at 6).

7 Based on Plaintiffs' motion for summary judgment, it appears that Plaintiffs' Rehabilitation 8 Act claim concerns the SSA's alleged failure to make the work reviews under Title II and Title XVI 9 accessible to individuals with mental or developmental disabilities. The parties do not dispute that 10 work reviews are reviews that take place after an individual has been deemed disabled and granted 11 benefits under Title II and/or Title XVI. See Docket No. 162 (Pls.' MSJ at 5); Docket No. 169
12 (Def.'s Opp'n at 5, 7). Essentially, work reviews are conducted by SSA to ensure that beneficiaries 13 are not earning above a certain income level; if they are, then benefits may be terminated, 14 suspended, and/or reduced. See Docket No. 162 (Pls.' MSJ at 6, 8); Docket No. 169 (Def.'s Opp'n 15 at 5, 7).

16 Under both Title II and Title XVI, there are "work incentives." Essentially, work incentives 17 are "[s]pecial rules [that] make it possible for people with disabilities receiving Social Security or 18 Supplemental Security Income (SSI) to work and still receive monthly payments and Medicare or 19 Medicaid." <http://www.ssa.gov/disabilityresearch/wi/generalinfo.htm> (last visited on 2/13/2012).
20 One example of a work incentive is an impairment-related work expense ("IRWE"). An IRWE is an 21 expense that a beneficiary incurs that is essential for his or her work. Such expenses are not 22 "counted" in a work review as a part of the beneficiary's earnings. See 40 C.F.R. § 404.1576(a) 23 ("When we figure your earnings in deciding if you have done substantial gainful activity, we will 24 subtract the reasonable costs to you of certain items and services which, because of your 25 impairment(s), you need and use to enable you to work."); 40 C.F.R. § 416.976(a) ("When we figure 26 your earnings in deciding if you have done substantial gainful activity, and in determining your 27 countable earned income (see § 416.1112(c)(5)), we will subtract the reasonable costs to you of 28 certain items and services which, because of your impairment(s), you need and use to enable you to

1 work.”). Thus, in a work review, if a beneficiary has a work incentive such as an IRWE, he or she 2 may have earnings that do not exceed the income level set by SSA and continue to obtain disability 3 insurance benefits under Title II or SSI under Title XVI.

4 According to Plaintiffs, SSA has failed to make the work reviews under Title II and Title 5 XVI accessible to individuals with mental or developmental disabilities because, e.g., SSA has failed 6 to train its employees (claims representatives) on how to conduct work reviews when the persons 7 being reviewed have mental or developmental disabilities (e.g., what work incentives may be 8 applicable), SSA has failed to train its employees on how to communicate with persons with such 9 disabilities, and SSA has failed to modify its forms to make them understandable to persons with 10 such disabilities. See Docket No. 162 (Pls.’ MSJ at 2, 21-24).

11 In their motion for summary judgment, Plaintiffs argue that, to comply with the 12 Rehabilitation Act, SSA must make the following modifications:

- 13 (1) Evaluate, monitor, and track individuals with mental or developmental disabilities so that 14 SSA employees are aware of (a) the individuals’ disabilities, (b) the associated functional 15 limitations, and (c) the need for reasonable accommodations. Plaintiffs propose that, when a 16 claimant first applies for Title II and/or Title XVI benefits, SSA should evaluate the 17 individual’s ability to understand written and oral communications, etc. SSA should then 18 monitor the individual by checking in periodically with his or her treating physicians to see if 19 there are any changes. Finally, the information initially obtained and thereafter updated 20 through monitoring should be tracked and made available to employees.
- 21 (2) Train SSA employees so that they have knowledge about (a) mental or developmental 22 disabilities and associated functional limitations, (b) how to communicate with persons with 23 such disabilities, and (c) the Rehabilitation Act and reasonable accommodations. Plaintiffs 24 suggest training in particular with respect to work reviews – e.g., what work incentives are 25 generally applicable to persons with mental or developmental disabilities.
- 26 (3) Modify forms (e.g., pamphlets, notices, work activity reports, both in terms of format and 27 language) to make them easily understandable by persons with mental or developmental 28 disabilities.

1 (4) Utilize existing information within SSA so that beneficiaries with mental or developmental 2 disabilities do not have to inform SSA about what it already knows and so that employees 3 proactively develop possible work incentives.

4 See Docket No. 162 (Pls.' MSJ at 2, 22-23).

5 Judge Patel held a hearing on Plaintiffs' motion for summary judgment in November 2010.
6 See Docket No. 185 (civil minutes); see also Docket No. 192 (hearing transcript). In accordance 7 with comments made by Judge Patel at that hearing, the parties stipulated to a schedule under which 8 Judge Patel would hear first SSA's motion for summary judgment, which would address threshold 9 issues such as standing and jurisdiction. Only after a ruling on that motion would the parties turn 10 back to Plaintiffs' motion for summary judgment, and Plaintiffs' motion would be considered only 11 after additional discovery and briefing. See Docket No. 192 (stipulation and order).

12 SSA filed its motion for summary judgment – the currently pending motion – in March 2011.
13 See Docket No. 195 (motion). Shortly after filing that motion, SSA filed another motion, more 14 specifically, a motion to dismiss or stay proceedings because it had decided to initiate a self-15 evaluation of its current policies and practices to measure compliance with the Rehabilitation Act.
16 SSA's position was, in essence, that, under exhaustion principles, the cases should be dismissed or 17 stayed because there is a substantial likelihood that the self-evaluation will address the specific 18 concerns raised by Plaintiffs here. See Docket No. 211 (motion).

19 SSA's motion to dismiss or stay was ultimately heard by this Court, after the cases were 20 reassigned. The Court denied the motion to dismiss but granted the alternative motion for a stay.
21 The Court permitted, however, only a limited stay; furthermore, in spite of the stay, it ordered SSA 22 to produce documents to Plaintiffs so that they could determine whether the self-evaluation would in 23 fact address their concerns. See Docket No. 243 (Order at 8-9).

24 In December 2011, the Court held a case management conference to get, inter alia, an update 25 on the self-evaluation. In a case management conference statement, Plaintiffs stated that they 26 opposed a further stay. See Docket No. 250 (St. at 2). They also submitted declarations in support 27 of their position. Those declarations further addressed, inter alia, reasonable accommodations that 28 could be made for Plaintiffs.

1 For example, Mr. Davis states in a declaration:

2 I believe that reasonable accommodations in the form of a SSA 3 employee(s) trained to assist me by knowing my impairments and 4 functional limitations, including that I am subject to anxiety as a result 5 of communicating with SSA, would allow me to participate in the 6 various Social Security notices (or other communications) regarding my benefits. If this reasonable accommodation had been in place earlier, I believe they [sic] would have lowered the anxiety level that I had, which resulted in sleepless nights and has required medical intervention in the past.

7 Docket No. 251 (Davis Decl. ¶ 4).

8 Similarly, Ariane Eroy, Mr. Doe's primary treating psychologist, states in a declaration:

9 I have thought about and discussed various communication 10 accommodations for John Doe with [his attorney]. I believe that 11 reasonable accommodations would be effective in helping him to 12 interact constructively with SSA and would increase his ability to live 13 independently and that these reasonable accommodations would 14 include: 1) John being assigned to a Social Security employee who has been trained about developmental delays, schizophrenia and autism; 2) that John could meet with this worker on an on-needed basis, should he have questions about his benefits and his responsibilities; and 3) that this worker would follow-up such meetings with a memo to the client and his case manager.

15 Docket No. 252 (Eroy Decl. ¶ 6).

16 Ultimately, the Court concluded, at the case management conference, that, in spite of the 17 stay, it would proceed with SSA's motion for summary judgment because it dealt with threshold 18 issues of standing and jurisdiction. See Docket No. 253 (civil minutes); Docket No. 267 (order).
19 The parties thus completed the briefing on SSA's motion. In its motion, SSA makes arguments 20 similar to those it previously made in its 12(b) motions. For example, SSA argues that Plaintiffs do 21 not have standing to proceed with their cases and that, because these cases are really about benefits 22 rather than systemic changes in SSA policies and practices (as reflected by Plaintiffs' deposition 23 testimony), the Court does not have subject matter jurisdiction until after Plaintiffs have exhausted 24 their administrative remedies. SSA further contends that, these problems aside, Plaintiffs do not 25 have standing to pursue the systemic relief identified in, e.g., their motion for summary judgment.

26 SSA's motion for summary judgment is the motion currently pending before the Court.

II. DISCUSSION

A. Plaintiffs' Request to File Under Seal (Docket No. 255)

As a preliminary matter, the Court should note that Plaintiffs have asked to file certain documents in support of their opposition brief under seal. See Docket No. 255 (Bruce Decl.) (describing documents). Most of the request is appropriate – e.g., where Plaintiffs ask for permission to redact their Social Security numbers from documents and the actual name of Mr. Doe. There is, however, one overbroad request to file under seal. More specifically, Plaintiffs ask that the transcripts for their depositions be sealed in their entirety. While there are significant portions of the depositions which discuss confidential or personal information, there are also significant portions that do not. It may be time consuming for Plaintiffs to go through a redaction process, but the public also has an interest in seeing as much as the file as it can given the issues being litigated in the case. Civil Local Rule 79-5 also indicates that any sealing be narrowly tailored. See Civ. L.R. 79-5(a) (providing that “[t]he request must be narrowly tailored to seek sealing only of sealable material”).

Accordingly, the Court grants Plaintiffs’ request to file under seal but, with respect to the deposition transcripts, orders Plaintiffs to publicly file transcripts which have confidential or personal information redacted. Counsel for Plaintiffs is directed to electronically file the documents under seal pursuant to General Order 62 by February 21, 2012. On that same date, Plaintiffs shall make their public filing.

B. Legal Standard for Summary Judgment

Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 56(c) provides that summary judgment shall be rendered “if the pleadings, depositions, answers to interrogatories, and admissions on file, together with the affidavits, if any, show that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact and that the moving party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law.” Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(c). An issue of fact is genuine only if there is sufficient evidence for a reasonable jury to find for the nonmoving party. See Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 248-49 (1986). “The mere existence of a scintilla of evidence . . . will be insufficient; there must be evidence on which the jury could reasonably find for the [nonmoving party].” Id. at 252. At the summary judgment stage, evidence must be viewed in

1 the light most favorable to the nonmoving party and all justifiable inferences are to be drawn in the 2 nonmovant's favor. See id. at 255.

3 Here, although evidence is to be viewed and inferences are to be drawn in Plaintiffs' favor 4 (as the nonmoving parties), Plaintiffs still have the burden of proving standing and subject matter 5 jurisdiction. See Lujan v. Defenders of Wildlife, 504 U.S. 555, 561 (1992) (stating that "[t]he party 6 invoking federal jurisdiction bears the burden of establishing [the] elements [of constitutional 7 standing]"); Utah Shared Access Alliance v. Carpenter, 463 F.3d 1125, 1137 (10th Cir. 2006) 8 (noting that "[t]he burden to establish prudential standing is on the plaintiff bringing the action"); 9 Mathews v. Eldridge, 424 U.S. 319, 327 (1976) (stating that "42 U.S.C. § 405(g) . . . requires 10 exhaustion of the administrative remedies provided under the [Social Security] Act as a 11 jurisdictional prerequisite"); Ureno v. Astrue, No. 1:10cv2163 SKO, 2011 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 52826, 12 at *9 (E.D. Cal. May 17, 2011) (rejecting plaintiff's contention "that Defendant has the burden to 13 prove the defense of failure to exhaust administrative remedies, [because] it is in fact the plaintiff's 14 burden to establish that subject matter jurisdiction is proper"). Because Plaintiffs have the ultimate 15 burden of proof on both standing and jurisdiction, SSA may prevail on its motion for summary 16 judgment simply by pointing to Plaintiffs' failure "to make a showing sufficient to establish the 17 existence of an element essential to [their] case." Celotex Corp. v. Catrett, 477 U.S. 317, 322 18 (1986).

19 C. Standing

20 SSA argues first that, as a matter of law, Plaintiffs lack both constitutional standing and 21 prudential standing to proceed with their cases.

22 1. Constitutional Standing

23 To establish Article III [i.e., constitutional] standing, a plaintiff 24 must show: (1) "an injury in fact – an invasion of a legally protected 25 interest which is (a) concrete and particularized and (b) actual or 26 imminent, not conjectural or hypothetical"; (2) "a causal connection 27 between the injury and the conduct complained of – the injury has to 28 be fairly . . . traceable to the challenged action of the defendant, and not . . . the result of the independent action of some third party not before the court"; and (3) "it must be likely, as opposed to merely speculative, that the injury will be redressed by a favorable decision."

1 Drake v. Obama, Nos. 09-56827, 10-55084, 2011 U.S. App. LEXIS 25763, at *6 (9th Cir. Dec. 22, 2 2011) (quoting Lujan, 504 U.S. at 560-61). Where a plaintiff seeks injunctive relief, he or she must 3 show not only an injury in fact but also “a sufficient likelihood that he will again be wronged in a 4 similar way.’ That is, he must establish a ‘real and immediate threat of repeated injury.’” Chapman 5 v. Pier 1 Imps. (U.S.), Inc., 631 F.3d 939, 948 (9th Cir. 2011). According to SSA, Plaintiffs have, as 6 a matter of law, failed to establish any of the above elements – i.e., an injury in fact, likelihood of 7 future injury, traceability, or redressability. The Court does not agree.

8 On the first element, i.e., injury in fact, the Court acknowledges that Judge Patel’s prior 9 orders focused on Plaintiffs’ emotional distress. See Davis Docket No. 26 (Order at 11) (citing Situ 10 v. Leavitt, No. C06-2841 TEH, 2006 WL 3734373, at *4 (N.D. Cal. Dec. 18, 2006); Doe Docket No.
11 26 (Order at 17) (citing the same). Contrary to what SSA suggests, many courts have found that 12 emotional distress may constitute an injury-in-fact for purposes of standing. See, e.g., Soobzokov v.
13 Holder, No. 10-6260 (DRD), 2011 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 65007, at *11-12 (D.N.J. June 7, 2011) 14 (holding that plaintiff “has satisfied the elements of standing” because “[h]e alleges to have 15 personally suffered emotionally as a result of Defendants’ failure to vigorously investigate and 16 prosecute several suspects for the murder of his father, and his request for damages and an 17 independent inquiry into Defendants’ investigation will likely redress his suffering”); Kennedy v.
18 City of Zanesville, 505 F. Supp. 2d 456, 484 (S.D. Ohio 2007) (stating that “Plaintiffs have each 19 alleged an actual, particularized injury in fact” by “claim[ing] that the pattern and practice of 20 discrimination by Defendants have resulted in economic loss, lack of fire suppression, humiliation, 21 embarrassment, and emotional distress over having poor water”); Carlough v. Amchem Prods., 834 22 F. Supp. 1437, 1451 (E.D. Pa. 1993) (noting that “other kinds of non-economic harm have been 23 accepted as Article III injury in fact, including aesthetic harm and emotional distress”).

24 Moreover, SSA fails to take into account that Plaintiffs’ emotional distress arises from their 25 claimed inability to meaningfully participate in the work review process. Thus, ultimately, 26 Plaintiffs’ primary injury in fact is the alleged discrimination suffered. Such discrimination clearly 27
28

1 can be an injury in fact for purposes of standing.<sup>2</sup> See, e.g., Chapman, 631 F.3d at 947 (stating that 2 “[o]nce a disabled individual has encountered or become aware of alleged ADA violations that 3 deter his patronage of or otherwise interfere with his access to a place of public accommodation, he 4 has already suffered an injury in fact traceable to the defendant’s conduct and capable of being 5 redressed by the courts, and so he possesses standing under Article III”); Armstrong v. Davis, 275 6 F.3d 849, 864 (9th Cir. 2001) (stating that “plaintiffs are subjected to discriminatory treatment on 7 account of their disabilities in violation of both the ADA and the Rehabilitation Act” and that “[t]his 8 treatment is sufficient to constitute an actual injury”); cf. Tennessee v. Lane, 541 U.S. 509, 513-14 9 (2004) (plaintiff asserting a Rehabilitation Act claim because county courthouse had no elevator and 10 therefore plaintiff had to crawl up two flights of stairs to get to the courtroom to answer a set of 11 criminal charges).

14 <sup>2</sup> To the extent SSA contends that Plaintiffs no longer suffer emotional distress, the evidence 15 of record does not fully support that contention.

16 For example, SSA asserts that Mr. Davis no longer suffers emotional distress because he has 17 SSA notices go to his attorney now instead of himself directly. See Mot. at 15 (arguing that this 18 process has “moot[ed] any possible complaints about the stress of receiving notices generally”). But 19 there is nothing to indicate that this is a permanent arrangement. In fact, it appears that the parties 20 negotiated this arrangement as a part of this litigation only, in order to resolve Mr. Davis’s motion 21 for temporary or preliminary injunctive relief. See Docket No. 51 (stipulation and order).

22 As for Mr. Doe, SSA suggests that he does not suffer emotional distress because he has not 23 sought additional psychological treatment, he has admitted that his condition has improved, and he 24 has help in understanding SSA notices (from his attorney, his mother, and his living skills trainer).
 25 SSA further asserts that, to the extent Mr. Doe has emotional distress, he has attributed that distress 26 to this litigation and not to other conduct by SSA. None of these arguments is particularly 27 persuasive. Contrary to what SSA argues, Mr. Doe does appear to have sought psychological 28 treatment because of SSA’s actions. Mr. Doe’s treating psychotherapist has submitted a declaration in which she states that Mr. Doe has in fact expressed to her “his fears at being unable to participate adequately in [SSA’s] processes, including his ability to comprehend SSA’s written notices and his difficulties in communicating orally with SSA staff[.]” Eroy Decl. ¶ 4. As for the fact that Mr.
 Doe’s condition may have improved, that does not mean that he does not suffer any emotional distress all. See Opp’n, Ex. I (Doe Depo., Ex. 110) (checking box on “[r]educed feelings of nervousness”) (emphasis added). Finally, the fact that Mr. Doe is able to obtain assistance in understanding SSA notices does not mean that he still does not suffer emotional distress as a result of the notices. To the extent SSA argues that Mr. Doe has attributed his distress to this litigation and not to SSA directly, that is not a fair characterization of Mr. Doe’s deposition testimony. At the deposition, Mr. Doe was asked what SSA was doing “currently” to make him think about suicide.
 His response was: “I guess it’s mainly because you’re asking me all these questions.” Opp’n, Ex. I (Doe Depo. at 125).

1 To the extent SSA contends there is no injury in fact unless Plaintiffs suffer a denial of 2 benefits, that argument is meritless. If Plaintiffs are subject to discrimination in the process and 3 denied equal access as required under the Rehabilitation Act, they have standing to assert a 4 Rehabilitation Act claim. The fact that the plaintiff in Tennessee v. Lane ultimately made it to the 5 courtroom by crawling up the courthouse steps did not negate his claim of unequal access.

6 Of course, to establish standing for injunctive relief, there must be not only an injury in fact 7 but also ““a sufficient likelihood that [the plaintiff] will again be wronged in a similar way.””

8 Chapman, 631 F.3d at 948. In Chapman, the Ninth Circuit expressly stated that 9 [a]n ADA plaintiff can show a likelihood of future injury when he 10 intends to return to a noncompliant accommodation and is therefore 11 likely to reencounter a discriminatory architectural barrier.

12 Alternatively, a plaintiff can demonstrate sufficient injury to pursue injunctive relief when discriminatory architectural barriers deter him from returning to a noncompliant accommodation.

13 Id. at 950. In light of Chapman, SSA’s position that Plaintiffs lack standing to pursue injunctive 14 relief is hard to comprehend. There is no dispute that Plaintiffs have both been determined to be 15 disabled under the Social Security Act. Furthermore, there is no dispute that they will continue to be 16 subject to work reviews in order to continue getting benefits under Title II and/or Title XVI. To the 17 extent SSA’s argument here is simply that “Plaintiffs cannot show that they will continue to have 18 problems” because SSA has “appoint[ed] employees to assist [them] while the cases are stayed,” 19 Reply at 13, the Court is not persuaded. The fact that SSA has offered what is in essence some 20 temporary or preliminary injunctive relief does not moot out the permanent relief sought by 21 Plaintiffs.

22 Finally, SSA’s arguments on traceability and redressability fail to take into account that 23 Plaintiffs’ injury in fact is ultimately the alleged discrimination. To the extent SSA’s arguments are 24 focused on Plaintiffs’ claims really being claims for benefits, those arguments are addressed in the 25 section below on subject matter jurisdiction. See Part II.D, infra.

26 The Court therefore denies SSA’s motion for summary judgment based on a lack of 27 constitutional standing.

28

1           2.       Prudential Standing

2           In its motion for summary judgment, SSA argues not only constitutional standing but also 3 prudential standing.

4                       “[P]rudential standing concerns require that [a court] consider . . .
5 whether the alleged injury is more than a mere generalized grievance, 6 whether [plaintiffs] are asserting [their] own rights or the rights of 7 third parties, and whether the claim falls within the zone of interests to 8 be protected or regulated by the constitutional guarantee in question.”

9           Stormans, Inc. v. Selecky, 586 F.3d 1109, 1122 (9th Cir. 2009). Here, Plaintiffs have alleged 10 personal violations of the Rehabilitation Act for which they seek redress. To the extent SSA has 11 concerns about the breadth of Plaintiffs’ claims, see Mot. at 19 (arguing that broad allegations 12 seeking systemic relief are being made), that is more appropriately addressed in the section below on 13 whether Plaintiffs have standing to seek systemic relief (i.e., the scope of Plaintiffs’ standing). See 14 Part II.E, infra; cf. Chapman, 631 F.3d at 950 (stating that, “[o]nce a plaintiff establishes Article III 15 standing, there remains the question of the scope of his standing”). To the extent SSA relies on 16 Allen v. Wright, 468 U.S. 737 (1984), the argument is not on point because Allen did not focus on 17 prudential standing but rather on constitutional standing, more specifically, the traceability 18 requirement. See id. at 759-60 (“The idea of separation of powers that underlies standing doctrine 19 explains why our cases preclude the conclusion that respondents’ alleged injury ‘fairly can be traced 20 to the challenged action’ of the IRS.”).

21           Accordingly, there is no basis for granting SSA summary judgment based on prudential 22 standing principles.

23           D.       Subject Matter Jurisdiction

24           SSA argues next that, even if Plaintiffs have standing to proceed with their cases, the Court 25 still lacks subject matter jurisdiction over the cases. SSA acknowledges that, previously, Judge 26 Patel determined that there was subject matter jurisdiction and thus denied its 12(b) motions to 27 dismiss. SSA maintains, however, that Judge Patel predicated her decision on Plaintiffs’ 28 Rehabilitation Act claims being sufficiently distinct from the underlying benefits claims such that exhaustion of the benefits claims would not assist in resolution of the Rehabilitation Act claims. See Davis Docket No. 26 (Order at 11); Doe Docket No. 26 (Order at 11). According to SSA, now that

1 Plaintiffs have been deposed, it is clear that Plaintiffs' claims are really benefits claims – i.e., during 2 their depositions, Plaintiffs made clear they are concerned about maintaining their benefits.

3 In their opposition brief, Plaintiffs suggest that their deposition testimony cannot be 4 completely taken at face value and interpreted as eschewing relief directed at systemic problems 5 because they have mental and/or developmental disabilities. That is a fair observation. Notably, 6 SSA did not, during Plaintiffs' depositions, ask whether their mental or developmental disabilities 7 would affect their ability to be deposed. And Plaintiffs' responses during the depositions suggest 8 that their disabilities do in fact affect their ability to be deposed.<sup>3</sup> In addition, there is medical 9 evidence that indicates Plaintiffs' ability to be deposed is affected by their disabilities.<sup>4</sup> The medical 10 evidence submitted by Plaintiffs also supports Plaintiffs' position that their declarations submitted in 11

13 <sup>3</sup> For example, as noted above, Mr. Doe stated that he was thinking about committing suicide 14 because SSA's attorney was asking him questions. See Opp'n, Ex. I (Doe Depo. at 125); see also 15 Opp'n, Ex. I (Doe Depo. at 115) (stating to SSA's attorney after being asked multiple questions 16 about auditory hallucinations, "[Y]ou're driving me crazy"). In his deposition, Mr. Davis engaged 17 in an exchange with SSA's attorney about whether SSA did anything that caused him to hallucinate.
18 See Opp'n, Ex. F (Davis Depo. at 85) (stating, "Asking me what I do with every penny and dime 19 that I get from Social Security, asking me, um – asking – just – just ask me simple questions. . . . If – 20 if you think those – if you call those hallucinations, of course, then I say Social Security is giving me 21 hallucinations").

22 <sup>4</sup> For example, there is a 1987 psychiatric evaluation of Mr. Davis (Exhibit F attached to 23 Plaintiffs' motion for summary judgment), in which the doctor notes, inter alia, that Mr. Davis tends 24 to present in a more positive light than he actually feels, that he is quite inflexible in terms of 25 communication, that his stream of thought is marked by constricted affect and thinking range, that 26 there is evidence he has poor judgment and unrealistic self assessment, that he has a tendency to 27 retreat from significant interaction with others, that he likely responds to environmental challenges 28 with inappropriate thinking and behavior, and that he has a vulnerable pattern of ego functions that are overwhelmed under increasing amounts of stress. Although this evaluation is more than 20 years old, there is also a more recent evaluation of Mr. Davis (Exhibit K attached to Plaintiffs' motion for summary judgment), in which the doctor states that Mr. Davis generally does not perceive him in a realistic manner with respect to work accomplishments or lack thereof and that he is likely to be overprotective about stating he is unable to work based on a disability.

As for Mr. Doe, there is a declaration from his treating psychotherapist in which she opines that "a deposition is not an appropriate means of obtaining reliable information from Mr. Doe" because, "[a]s a result of his impairments, he fails to understand symbolic or abstract thought"; because, "[u]nder stress, it is common for Mr. Doe to become overly stimulated, to misread cues, or even to lash out in anger"; and because, "[d]uring the deposition, Mr. Doe may have failed to stop the proceedings to ask for clarification, even if confused." Eroy Decl. ¶ 3. The doctor continues: "It is not unusual for Mr. Doe to experience problems in: 1) maintaining his level of attention; 2) processing information; and 3) transitioning between subjects." Eroy Decl. ¶ 3.

1 support of the opposition to the summary judgment motion (in which they testify they had 2 difficulties in the deposition<sup>5</sup>) are not sham declarations.

3 In its reply brief, SSA argues that Plaintiffs should not be allowed to pick and choose what is 4 reliable in their depositions and/or declarations and what is not. See Reply at 1 (“Plaintiffs oppose 5 SSA’s motion by claiming that anything harmful in Plaintiffs’ testimony is unreliable, while 6 simultaneously relying on the same deposition testimony for statements Plaintiffs perceive as helpful 7 and submitting declarations from these purportedly unreliable individuals.”). While SSA’s point is 8 understandable, it is not persuasive. At this juncture, all evidence is to be viewed and all inferences 9 are to be drawn in Plaintiffs’ favor as they are the nonmoving parties. This includes ““questions of 10 credibility and of the weight to be accorded particular evidence.”” Suzuki Motor Corp. v.
11 Consumers Union of United States, Inc., 330 F.3d 1110, 1132-33 (9th Cir. 2003); see also Fed. R.
12 Evid. 601 & advisory committee notes (providing that “[e]very person is competent to be a witness” 13 because “[a] witness wholly without capacity is difficult to imagine,” but how much weight and 14 credibility to give to the witness is a matter for the jury to decide).

15 Finally, the fact that Plaintiffs did not disavow caring about their benefits does not mean that 16 they do not also care about being able to participate in the SSA work review process. This is 17 because maintaining benefits is intimately tied to participation in the SSA work review process; i.e., 18 without being able to fully participate in the process (e.g., understand the SSA notices), Plaintiffs’ 19 benefits are potentially jeopardized. Furthermore, in their depositions, Plaintiffs did make 20 comments indicating that they do in fact care about participation. See, e.g., Opp’n, Ex. F (Davis

21 _____
22 <sup>5</sup> See, e.g., Davis Decl. ¶ 8 (“During my deposition, I had a lot of difficulties. I generally 23 need a lot of time to understand SSA notices. During the deposition, I was not given the time I 24 needed to absorb and understand the documents I was given. I would have been able to give better 25 answers if I had had more time. There were many times that I did not understand the question I was 26 being asked. At other times, it was hard for me to answer because I felt like I was being accused of 27 lying.”); Doe Decl. ¶ 7 (“During my deposition, I had a lot of difficulty understanding the questions 28 that I was asked and how to answer them. Many times Mr. Pyle used unusual and complicated words in his questions. I did the best I could. It would have been easier for me if I had been allowed to take more time to answer the questions but I felt like I had to answer the questions right away. Also I had a hard time because it was not like a conversation. The questions were not on the same subject. Sometimes when I tried to ask a question, Mr. Pyle cut me off. Sometimes I would be shown a document and asked a question about something else. I get distracted when he changes the subject. When I get distracted, I forget what I am going to say.”).

1 Depo. at 75) (stating that, when he fills out a form, he is not sure whether he has filled it out
2 correctly; “I hesitate to turn them in to Social Security because I think I might have made a mistake 3 or errors”); Opp’n, Ex. H (Doe Depo. 95) (testifying that he wanted professional help – i.e., help 4 from his attorney and his independent living skills trainer – to deal with Social Security and help 5 understand documents).

6 Accordingly, the Court rejects SSA’s argument that the evidence of record establishes that 7 Plaintiffs care only about their benefits (in which case there must first be administrative exhaustion) 8 and not about participation (protected by the Rehabilitation Act). Plaintiffs have not waived or 9 abandoned their Rehabilitation Act claims.

10 E. Standing re Systemic Relief

11 The final issue for the Court is whether, Plaintiffs have “standing” to pursue systemic relief 12 as opposed to individual relief. (Although SSA refers to “standing,” it probably is better to frame 13 the issue as to whether the scope of the injunctive relief sought by Plaintiffs is proper.) SSA also 14 argues, for the first time in their reply brief, that to the extent Plaintiffs seek individual relief, that 15 relief has not been adequately pled in the complaints and is in any event not ripe.

16 With respect to systemic relief, it is important to note – as SSA emphasizes – that neither the 17 Davis nor the Doe case is, at present, a class action. Indeed, the Davis case was initially filed as a 18 class action, but Judge Patel denied Mr. Davis’s motion for class certification and, although given an 19 opportunity to re-file such a motion, he declined to do so. “[I]njunctive relief generally should be 20 limited to apply only to named plaintiffs where there is no class certification.” Easyriders Freedom 21 F.I.G.H.T. v. Hannigan, 92 F.3d 1486, 1501 (9th Cir. 1996); see also Zepeda v. United States 22 Immigration & Naturalization Serv., 753 F.2d 719, 729 n.1 (9th Cir. 1985) (vacating preliminary 23 injunction because it gave “broad relief . . . not necessary to remedy the rights of the individual 24 plaintiffs; if the scope of the injunction is narrowed, there is no question that the individual plaintiffs 25 will be protected from the INS’s former practices” and “[t]hat is all the relief to which they are 26 entitled”; adding that “there would be no need for class actions” if the opposite were true).

27 Still, that does not necessarily mean that Plaintiffs are barred from seeking and obtaining 28 systemic relief. First, “an injunction is not necessarily made overbroad by extending benefit or

1 protection to persons other than prevailing parties in the lawsuit – even if it is not a class action – if 2 such breadth is necessary to give prevailing parties the relief to which they are entitled.” Id. at 3 1501-02 (emphasis omitted). For example, in Easyriders, the district court issued an injunction 4 barring the California Highway Patrol (“CHP”) from citing from any motorcyclists – and not just the 5 individual plaintiffs who had brought suit – without probable cause to believe that they had violated 6 the California Vehicle Code helmet law. See id. at 1492-93. The Ninth Circuit upheld the 7 injunction, explaining as follows:

8 Because the CHP policy regarding helmets is formulated on a 9 statewide level, other law enforcement agencies follow the CHP’s 10 policy, and it is unlikely that law enforcement officials who were not 11 restricted by an injunction governing their treatment of all 12 motorcyclists would inquire before citation into whether a 13 motorcyclist was among the named plaintiffs or a member of 14 Easyriders, the plaintiffs would not receive the complete relief to 15 which they are entitled without statewide application of the injunction.

16 Id. at 1502. In order for the plaintiffs to get effective relief, systemic relief was necessary.

17 Second, the Ninth Circuit has indicated that, where there is a systemwide injury because of a 18 policy or practice that pervades an institution, then widespread relief is justified to remedy that 19 injury. See Clement v. California Dep’t of Corrections, 364 F.3d 1148, 1153 (9th Cir. 2004) 20 (emphasizing that the scope of an injunction depends on the extent of the violation established, and 21 citing in support Armstrong v. Davis, 275 F.3d 849, 870 & n.27 (9th Cir. 2001)). Thus, in Clement, 22 the Ninth Circuit deemed appropriate an injunction enjoining the enforcement of an internet mail 23 policy in all California prisons, and not just the prison where the plaintiff was housed, because there 24 was “uncontroverted evidence that at least eight California prisons ha[d] adopted [the] policy” and 25 more were considering it. Id. “Because a substantial number of California prisons are considering 26 or have enacted virtually identical policies, the unconstitutional policy has become sufficiently 27 pervasive to warrant system-wide relief.” Id. The court also noted:

28 The state offers no argument that a total internet mail ban might be constitutional if implemented at a different prison. In such circumstances, it would be inefficient and unnecessary for prisoners in each California state prison to separately challenge the same internet mail policy; it would simply force [the California Department of Corrections] to face repetitive litigation.

1 Id.

2 While Plaintiffs have not at this juncture sufficiently shown that their cases may be 3 analogous to Easyriders (nationwide changes may not be necessary to accommodate Mr. Davis and 4 Mr. Doe), their cases may be comparable to Clement. That is, they have submitted evidence 5 indicating that the alleged deficiencies in the handling of work reviews by the SSA is systemwide 6 which, under Clement, would give rise to the possibility of broad relief. For example, Plaintiffs 7 have pointed out that at least three other individuals with mental or developmental disabilities have 8 filed complaints with SSA related to the lack of reasonable accommodations. See Docket No. 155 9 (Pls.’ MSJ at 9 & Ex. WW). Plaintiffs have also pointed to statistics indicating that, e.g., mentally 10 disabled individuals have their benefits terminated based on work reviews at a disproportionate rate.
11 See Docket No. 155 (Pls.’ MSJ at 20 & Exs. H, KKK).

12 At the hearing, SSA did not so much take issue with the above evidence as criticize Clement.
13 SSA’s criticism is understandable. It is difficult to square Clement with other authority holding that 14 “injunctive relief generally should be limited to apply only to named plaintiffs where there is no 15 class certification.” Easyriders, 92 F.3d at 1501. However, Clement is still good law in this circuit, 16 and the Court is bound thereby.<sup>6</sup>

17 Because Plaintiffs have submitted some evidence indicating that there may be a systemwide 18 problem, the Court defers ruling on the issue of whether Plaintiffs have adequately established 19 “standing” to pursue systemic relief. The Court notes that deferral of the issue is especially 20 appropriate because this issue of standing is inextricably intertwined with the merits of this case and, 21 because the Court previously bifurcated discovery, the merits phase of this case is not yet ripe for 22 adjudication. Hence, the Court denies this part of the SSA’s motion without prejudice.

23 Finally, to the extent SSA has now challenged any individual relief requested by Plaintiffs, 24 the Court rejects that challenge. First, SSA never made that argument in its opening motion; it is not 25 fair for SSA to now raise the argument for the first time in its reply brief. Second, contrary to what 26

27 <sup>6</sup> To the extent SSA indicated at the hearing that the Court should certify for an interlocutory 28 appeal the validity of Clement, at least in the context of this case, it is free to make a motion before this Court if the criteria set forth therein are satisfied. See 28 U.S.C. § 1292(b).

1 SSA suggests, Plaintiffs' complaints may be fairly read to include a request for individualized relief 2 even if the complaints do not identify the exact individualized relief sought (e.g., being assigned a 3 trained SSA employee). Third, to the extent SSA argues that the specific accommodations identified 4 by Plaintiffs in their December 2011 declarations (i.e., being assigned a trained SSA employee) are 5 not ripe for review, that argument does not have much merit. As noted above, the accommodations 6 requests are not really new; rather, they are simply more specific. Judge Patel has already held that 7 Plaintiffs have appropriately exhausted their Rehabilitation Act claims. See Davis Docket No. 26 8 (Order at 8) (noting that "Plaintiff's claims in the instant action arise from the civil rights 9 proceeding, for which defendant acknowledges plaintiff has exhausted his administrative 10 remedies"); Doe Docket No. 26 (Order at 15) (finding exhaustion of the civil rights claim because 11 Mr. Doe had filed an administrative action and SSA issued a final position on the same substantive 12 claim raised by other individuals). Moreover, there is nothing to suggest that SSA would give 13 Plaintiffs the specific accommodations sought if it were given the opportunity to consider the 14 request. Notably, in its reply brief, SSA states that it has appointed employees to assist Plaintiffs but 15 only "while the cases are stayed." Reply at 13.

16 III. CONCLUSION

17 For the foregoing reasons, the Court rules as follows.

18 (1) Plaintiffs' motion to file under seal is granted but Plaintiffs must publicly file a 19 redacted version of the transcripts of Plaintiffs' depositions.

20 (2) SSA's motion for summary judgment is denied.

21 (3) In light of the Court's denial of SSA's motion for summary judgment, Plaintiffs' 22 objections to SSA's reply brief and motion to strike certain portions of the reply brief are moot.

23 Finally, because the Court is denying SSA's motion for summary judgment, the next step for 24 the Court is to consider how to proceed with Plaintiffs' motion for summary judgment. As the Court 25 stated at the hearing and in its order of February 1, 2012, see Docket No. 267 (order), the parties' 26 previous stipulation, entered as an order by Judge Patel, indicated that there would be a period for 27 merits discovery and then an opportunity for new briefing based on the merits discovery. Given the 28 passage of time since Plaintiffs' motion was originally filed, the Court was inclined to follow this

1 approach. Plaintiffs, however, suggest that the Court could entertain the motion at this juncture, 2 based on the discovery already completed and the briefs already submitted, aside from the request 3 for systemic relief.

4 In light of Plaintiffs' proposal, the Court orders the parties to meet and confer to discuss 5 whether this approach is feasible. The Court notes that it may be possible to proceed with Plaintiffs' 6 motion based on the discovery that has already been completed. It appears that Plaintiffs are willing 7 to forego any further discovery<sup>7</sup>; it is not clear what discovery SSA would need to conduct now that 8 Plaintiffs have been deposed. New briefing, however, may be warranted in light of the passage of 9 time.

10 The meet and confer shall take place within a week of the date of this order. Within 11 two weeks of the date of this order, the parties shall file a joint statement as to how the Court 12 should proceed on Plaintiffs' motion for summary judgment. If the parties are unable to 13 reach an agreement on how to proceed, then each side should state its last offer of 14 compromise.

15 This order disposes of Davis Docket Nos. 195, 255, and 266 and Doe Docket Nos. 109, 167, 16 and 178.
